

Learned and Wise

“Anything you say to the wise will make them wiser. Whatever you tell the righteous will add to their knowledge” Proverbs 9:9

To be educated is to be learned – to know about God’s creation and about people who are part of it. But facts and skills are of little value unless we have wisdom also the ability to see what is important and what is not.

Quote and passage from Cameron Martin Year 13

“As a student at St Joseph’s, I am encouraged to take responsibility for my learning in lessons and work independently when asked too. I receive feedback in my books in pink in all subjects which I respond to in green pen. For option at GCSE and 6th form, I have chosen subjects which I am really interested in and this had made me feel responsible enough to make these choices and motivated to pursue my interests. Our tutor publicizes every half-term all the enrichment opportunities on at lunchtimes or after-school and during the elective program. There is a wide variety of choices from Duke of Edinburgh to football and I currently attend the elective program. I currently am a member of the school Chaplaincy team which provides lots of opportunities in and out of school. I am aware other students have received the diocesan Faith in Action award through work in their parish. I really feel like the opportunities I have make me feel like I am cared for and challenged. As a student in my tutor group, I take turns to lead tutor time prayers and take part in Mass.”
